THE MONUMENT.

IMPOSING CEREMONIES TO-DAY.

THE COLOSSAL SHAFT DEDICATED.

HONORS TO THE MEMORY OF WASHINGTON.

DETAILS OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT ARTHUR DEDICATES THE OBELISK.

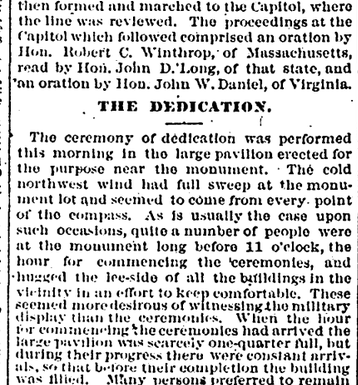
Addresses by Mr. Corcoran and Colonel Casey—Masonic Rites at the Base of the Shaft—A Splendid Procession to the Capitol—Proceedings in the Hall of the House of Representatives—Orations by Hon. Robert C. Winthrop and Hon. John W. Daniel.

The Washington National Monument was formally dedicated to-day with imposing ceremonies. The day was cold and windy, but the sky was clear. Many buildings along the line of the procession were decorated with flags and gay bunting, which gave rich effects of color in the bright sunlight. The program arranged for the ceremonies was faithfully carried out in every detail. The first part of the ceremonies took place at the monument grounds, where the shaft was dedicated by President Arthur to the memory of Washington. The procession was then formed and marched to the Capitol, where the line was reviewed. The proceedings at the Capitol which followed comprised an oration by Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, of Massachusetts, read by Hon. John D. Long, of that state, and an oration by Hon. John W. Daniel, of Virginia.

THE DEDICATION.

The ceremony of dedication was performed this morning in the large pavilion erected for the purpose near the monument. The cold northwest wind had full sweep at the monument lot and seemed to come from every point of the compass. As is usually the case upon such occasions, quite a number of people were at the monument long before 11 o'clock, the hour for commencing the ceremonies, and hugged the lee-side of all the buildings in the vicinity in an effort to keep comfortable. These seemed more desirous of witnessing the military display than the ceremonies. When the hour for commencing the ceremonies had arrived the large pavilion was scarcely one-quarter full, but during their progress a very considerable crowd arrived, so that before their completion the building was filled. Many persons preferred to remain in their carriages.

Shortly before 11 o'clock Gen. Sheridan, the marshal of the day, and his mounted staff, took their position in front of the pavilion, and remained there during the exercises. The different military organizations were stationed at different points about the grounds. The Marine band was stationed in front of the pavilion, which was well adapted for such ceremonies. The structure was covered and partly closed, and kept off the chilly winds to some extent, but it was intensely cold, nevertheless. Back of the speakers' stand were reserved seats for the National Monument society and joint commission. To the left were the governors and their representatives; to the right, army and navy officers, and directly in front, the Diplomatic corps, Congressmen, and judiciary. At a few minutes of 11 o'clock the members of the monument society arrived, Mr. W. W. Corcoran leaning on the arm of Dr. J. C. Welling.



THE CHAIRMAN.

At exactly eleven o'clock Senator Sherman, the presiding officer, called the assemblage to order with a gavel made of a piece of the cap stone of the monument, with a handle of rosewood from Brazil, which Colonel Casey presented to him. He prefaced his remarks by saying that nobody expected to take off his hat, not even the speakers. Mr. Sherman then delivered the following address:

Senator Sherman's Speech.

The commission authorized by the two houses of Congress to provide suitable ceremonies for the dedication of the Washington monument direct me to preside and to announce the order of ceremonies decreed proper on this occasion. I need not say anything to impress upon you the dignity of the event you have met to celebrate. The monument speaks for itself—simple in form, admirable in proportions, composed of enduring marble and granite, resting upon foundations broad and deep, it rises into the skies higher than any work of human art. It is the most imposing, costly and appropriate monument ever erected in the honor of one man.

It had its origin in the profound conviction of the people, irrespective of party, creed or race, the only one of the country, of all civilized countries, that the name and fame of Washington should be perpetuated by the most imposing testimonial of a nation's gratitude to its Hero, Statesman and Father. This universal sentiment took form in a movement of private citizens associated under the name of the Washington National Monument Association, who, on the 31st day of January, 1848, secured from Congress an act authorizing them to erect the proposed monument on this ground, selected as the most appropriate site by the President of the United States. Its cornerstone was laid on the fourth day of July, 1848, by the Masonic fraternity, with imposing ceremonies, in the presence of the chief officer of the government and a multitude of citizens. It was partially erected by the National Monument Association with means furnished by the voluntary contributions of the people of the United States.

On the fifth day of July, 1876, one hundred years after the declaration of American Independence, Congress, in the name of the people of the United States formally assumed and directed the completion of the monument. Since then the foundation has been strengthened, the shaft has been steadily advanced, and the now completed structure stands before you.

It is a fit memorial of the greatest character in human history. It looks down upon scenes most loved by him on earth, the most conspicuous object in a landscape full of objects deeply interesting to the American people. All eyes turn to it, and all hearts feel the inspiration of its beauty, symmetry and grandeur. Strong as it is, it will not be so long as the memory of him, in whose honor it was built, but while it stands it will be the evidence to many succeeding generations of the love and reverence of this generation for the name and fame of George Washington.

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." More even than this, the prototype of purity, manhood and patriotism, for all lands and for all time.

Without further preface I proceed to discharge the duty assigned me.

After music a prayer was delivered by Rev. Mr. Suter, of Christ church, Alexandria. Everything was in confusion, however, and scarcely a word could be heard. The stand commenced to fill up, and those seated involuntarily kept their feet moving to keep warm. During the prayer the President arrived, accompanied by Marshal McMichael, and followed by Secretaries Frelinghuysen, McCulloch, Lincoln and Teller. At the conclusion of the prayer the pavilion was pretty well filled, and the speakers' platform were the President, his cabinet, Senator Sherman, Senator Bayard, Mr. Corcoran, Mr. Geo. Baucroft, Dr. Welling, Horatio King and Colonel Casey. Among those in the pavilion were Admirals Simpson and Carter, Commodores Semmes, Kimberly, Ghirardi, Sicard, Capt. Harmony, Prof. Simon Newcomb, Paymaster General Smith, Gen. Miles, Gen. Huzen and Surgeon General Murray, all in uniform; Col. Wilson, Director of the Mint Burchard, the Russian, Chinese, Swiss and Spanish ministers, Judges Schofield, Drake and Nott, of the Court of Claims; Rev. Dr. Elliott, of Ascension church; Supervising Architect Hall and his predecessor, Mr. Hill; Mr. U. E. Painter, and Director of the Mint Burchard. The chilled audience could not keep still, and during the remainder of the ceremonies eagerly took advantage of every opportunity to applaud, making the wooden shed resound with their stampings, which could scarcely be checked.

The following speech of Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the first vice president of the Washington Monument society, was read by Dr. J. C. Welling, of Columbian University:

Remarks of Mr. Corcoran.

It has been said that the fame of those who spend their lives in the service of their country is better preserved by the "unwritten memorials of the heart than by any material monument." The saying is pre-eminently true of the man whom the people of these United States must forever hold in grateful veneration as the one entitled above all others to the honored name of Pater Patriæ. Yet the instincts of the heart do but follow the impulses of our higher nature when, in honor of the mighty dead, they call for the commemorative column or the stately monument, not, indeed, to preserve the name and fame of an illustrious hero and patriot, but to signalize the g
